The William E. Colby
Director of Central Intelligence
Langley, Virginia

Dear Bill:

Referring back to a conversation we had last fall, I would appreciate your approval to have access to the OPC History written by myself prior to retirement.

For one thing, I understood that I would be called back to review the finished document. This has not taken place so I have never seen the material in final form.

Secondly, I am trying to write a piece for publication describing the historical events and atmosphere (political) that led to the creation of a secret political warfare mechanism and its placement in CIA. I have no publisher; and whether this piece will see the light of day is open to question. In any event, I wish to avoid anything sensitive and will submit what I write to you before submission to any publisher.

What I am trying to do is knock down the false conception that the entry of CIA into secret political warfare was a self-generated move.

I will be here for another week or so and would like to see the material promptly if it is at all possible. Could you have someone get in touch with [illegible]?

I hesitate to bother you with this detail but I would either like to go ahead with the article or cross it off and forget it. Many thanks

Sincerely Yours
